
Winds of Change -- Review/Endorsement...

Brent Aitchison, Entertainer & Producer

"Winds Of Change" blew me away.

From the beginning of this original work by JoAnn-Vickers-Wilburn I was hooked. I found myself transported into the story becoming more involved with each narrative passage. In this story we find ourselves completely enthralled by the character Julie as we follow her from teenager through mid-adulthood years. Vickers-Wilburn's moving and sensitive characterization of Julie navigates this story with a depth and brilliance that commands the listener to be completely immersed in this drama.

The end of each chapter of this story is song performed by Vickers-Wilburn. This music to me is like an encore to what has already been a great performance. The author, in a very effective way, uses this original music as its exclamation point as well as a way to transition.

Vickers-Wilburn's voice is reminiscent of those great lady's of song like Baez, Mitchell, and Rondstadt. Every note is found, felt, and placed precisely where it should be.

The entirety of " Winds Of Change" leaves you in the end feeling you have just been absorbed into someone's life. I found myself in the solitude of my den wanting to applaud out loud as if it were a live theatrical performance.

JoAnn Vickers-Wilburn's great talents would make this a great one woman show. Please someone let me know where I can by my ticket in advance!
